Why Vitamin C?

Antioxidants are nutrients our bodies need to function and remain healthy. Vitamin C is a potent antioxidant and has several important functions:

- Neutralises free radicals to keep cells healthy.
- Helps maintain healthy blood vessels, bones & cartilage.
- Assists with wound healing.
- Stimulates Collagen 1 synthesis.

Vitamin C is one of the most valued active ingredients in dermatology because of the multiple benefits on the skin. Vitamin C is one of the most powerful antioxidants known, but it has been under-used in skin care preparations due to stability problems.

Why Vitamin C?

Ascorbic Acid (also known as L-ascorbic acid) is the pure form of Vitamin C and the most active.

However, it is very sensitive to light, air exposure, and water and quickly loses its antioxidant benefits.

It is difficult to use pure Ascorbic Acid in skincare formulas due to poor stability and low pH requirements but can be used in 'freshly activated formulas' including Anesi Lab 3C Vitamin Glow Facial.

- Ascorbic Acid derivatives offer effective stable alternatives and can be used in a variety of different formulations. Anesi Lab uses proven derivatives: Ascorbyl Palmitate, Sodium Ascorbyl Phosphate, Ethyl Ascorbic Acid, Ascorbyl Glucoside.
- Vitamin C benefits also multiply when used with other antioxidants, especially vitamin E.
- Vitamin C derivatives can still be vulnerable, and packaging plays an important role to ensure the antioxidant potency does not diminish. Anesi Lab packaging is carefully chosen to protect the actives.

Why Vitamin C?

Antioxidant-rich foods help keep our bodies healthy and more able to fight off damaging free radicals. The oxidation caused by free radicals destroys the collagen and elastin in the skin, resulting in premature ageing.

Because our bodies have a high demand for antioxidants very low levels filter through to the skin.

Applying antioxidants topically to the skin provides the best protection against free radical damage.

Studies show that when applied topically Vitamin C ensures a more effective defence against oxidation caused by daily aggressors like UV and air pollution that increase free radical activity.

- ❖ Vitamin C helps slow down ageing by preventing free radical damage.
- ❖ Vitamin C aids in the skin's natural regeneration process to help repair damaged skin cells.
- ❖ Vitamin C stimulates Collagen 1 synthesis improving dermal density.
- ❖ Vitamin C brightens, evens skin tone and improves texture.
